Ollie Duffie and Hubert Cheatham Are Held for Fulton Murder

Three negroes were held to the Hempstead county grand jury Monday when arraigned before Municipal Court Judge W. L. Kemley on charges of murder.

James Sampson, 37, was held for the murder of Telia Cox, 55, negro woman. Officers said that Sampson killed the Cox woman by stabbing her to death late Saturday night at the home of the negro woman just outside the city limits north of Hope.

Officers said that Sampson appeared there in a drunkenness condition and asked for his wife. The Cox woman, witnesses said, told Sampson that his wife was not there.

Sampson became angry and stabbed the woman to death with a knife.

Ollie Z. Duffie and Hubert Cheatham, negroes living south of Fulton, were held for the murder of Dannie Johnson, another negro, who was clubbed to death last week in a fight over stolen clothes.

Mother Shoots 3 Children, Suicides

Each of Quartet Dies Instantly, Medical Examiner Reports

MADISON, Mo.—(P)—Mrs. Annie E. Jones, 32, shot and killed three of her five children and then committed suicide by shooting. Dr. W. S. Stinchfield, medical examiner, reported Sunday night.

The child victims were twin four-year-olds, Robert and Edward, and Norman, 2.

Mrs. Jones, the doctor said, tied the three children together, and shot each through the head with a rifle.

She shot herself under the jaw, he said, and the shot went upward through her head.

The First County Government in Arkansas---Hempstead, 1818

Section "B" of The Star's Arkansas Centennial Edition, carrying Mrs. Charlean Moss Williams' authentic history of the original Hempstead county, came off the press Sunday. The Centennial Edition will be issued this Friday, June 26.

The Star has avoided Sunday work as much as possible—but pictures scheduled to arrive from the out-of-town engraving plant Saturday morning were delayed until Sunday by the crowded condition of the mails during distribution of the soldiers' adjusted service certificates.

Section "B," which will be the second of six sections in the complete edition, is the fourth to come off the press—a total of 32 pages already printed. The Centennial issue will have 48 pages all told.

Section "B" carries 11 pictures, and the 32 pages already printed carry a total of 41.

Index of Sections "C," "D" and "E" has already been published. The contents of Section "B" follow:

Leaders of 4 Years Ago Are Missing at Democratic Meet

By NEA Service

PHILADELPHIA—There will be a number of vacant chairs when the Democratic national convention assembles here June 23.

Many of the more large, prominent chairs, and some of those which are not vacant will be filled by men who oppose the party's certain nominee. Several have promised that their chairs will be vacant if the proceedings do not please them.

Eleven men were regarded four years ago as possible nominees by the convention that chose Franklin D. Roosevelt. They were Newton D. Baker, Jim "Ham" Loris, George White, James Reed, Harry Byrd, Albert Ritchie, Mel Traylor, "Alfalfa" Bill Murray, A. Smith, John Garner, and Samuel Senbury.

Of these men, Ritchie and Traylor are dead.

Reed, former Missouri senator, and Smith, former New York governor and one-time ally of the party, have become bitter opponents of the Roosevelt regime.

Baker, unsympathetic to the New Deal, is apparently retiring from politics, having recently surrendered his leadership of the local Democratic organization in Cleveland, his home town.

George White, Ohio governor four years ago, is apparently out of politics, and "Alfalfa Bill" Murray lives quietly on his farm near Idabel, Okla., a quiet contrast to the days when he was raising more ruckus than livestock.

Jim "Ham" Lewis and Harry Byrd are active in the senate, the former defending the later attacking the New Deal. Seabury has not figured in recent political news, and Garner will undoubtedly be chosen again to run with Roosevelt as vice presidential candidate.

Time and chance have dealt variously with others who were prominent in that Democratic convention of four years ago.

Both Louis Howe, trusted friend and adviser to Roosevelt, and Huey Long, who helped nominate F. D. R. only to become a savage opponent later, are dead. Tom Walsh, the doughty Montana lawyer who was slated to become attorney-general, died even before the administration took office. So did Tony Cernacy, Chicago's martyred mayor. Norman Mack and John Cohn, publisher-supporters of F. D. R. also are dead.

Joett Shouse and John Raskob, former Democratic party "angels," are now lending their support to the American Liberty League, which has engineered the most vitriolic attacks on Roosevelt's New Deal.

John W. Davis, Democratic presidential candidate in 1924, has been lending his great legal talents to various suits against New Deal laws. James M. Cox, the former Ohio governor who bore the party standard in 1920, appears to have retired from active party councils.

Governor Ely of Massachusetts, however, has flatly announced that if the party platform does not follow supreme court decisions against New Deal laws, he will follow Al Smith in "taking a walk" from the convention hall and aligning himself with the Republicans.

The G. O. P. platform contains a flat invitation for similar-minded old-line Democrats to follow the elephant. From this decimation of "old guard" Democrats leaders by death and defection, it becomes clear that there is a transfer of power in the Democratic party to new leadership that is no less marked, even if more gradual, than the Cleveland convention stamped on the Republican.

Hounds Are Used in Convict Hunt

Escaped Texas Prisoners Reported Seen in Colorado County

RETRIEVE PRISON FARM, Texas.—(P)—Farm Captain Rube Conner said Sunday that bloodhounds had been sent to Rock, Island, Colorado county, to search for two of three convicts who escaped here Friday after killing a guard.

Conner said a group of negroes reported to him that they were forced to take two men, believed to be Luke Trammell and Forrest Gibson, to a point near Rock Island. He said the negroes told him the men left the car in which they were riding near Rock Island and continued their flight on foot. The negroes said the men were armed with shotguns and pistols.

Conner said he had received no report on the third escaped prisoner, T. V. Atkinson.

Demo Dissenters Open Campaign to Defeat Roosevelt

Bloc Led by Al Smith and Four Other New Deal Critics

THREATEN TO BOLT

Convention Meeting Tuesday to Pay Little Heed to Smith's Plea

NEW YORK.—(P)—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and four other outstanding Democratic dissenters to the New Deal opened a direct fight against the renomination of President Roosevelt.

In a joint statements Smith, former Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, former Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby and former state Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Cohalan demanded "the putting aside of Franklin D. Roosevelt and the substitution of some genuine Democrat."

"There was in the statement addressed to the delegates of the national Democratic convention of 1936," an expression closely akin to a threat to bolt if Mr. Roosevelt should be renominated.

If the anti-Roosevelt drive failed, they said, "then partiotic voters of all parties will know unquestioningly to what standard they must rally in order to preserve the America to the great leaders of the past."

Foes of New Deal

All five have been hostile to President Roosevelt's policies for some time, but this was their first move in concert. In December, Ely said he would support Smith if he sought the Democratic nomination this year. Smith has made no move indicating he desired it. It was Ely in 1932 led the unsuccessful fight for Smith's nomination.

Smith's leadership in this newly formed "stop Roosevelt" movement followed by six months his speech in Washington before the American Liberty League in which he threatened obliquely to "take a walk" if Mr. Roosevelt were renominated.

Reed last August predicted Mr. Roosevelt's defeat if the Republicans adopted a "good" platform and chose a "good" candidate.

Colby in May, 1935, urged "some form of political action" against the New Deal "that is for our country and above party."

In Washington, Joseph Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, asserted that Democrats owed no loyalty to the "New Deal" and hinted that they "take a walk" from the party's Philadelphia convention.

Farley Jilts Back

PHILADELPHIA.—(P)—The gathering Democrats pledged to Roosevelt and Garner paused in convention preparations to discuss consequences of the "take a walk" invitation issued in New York by five leading dissenters.

Making the only formal comment on the demand of Al Smith and the others that the party turn from Roosevelt and nominate a "genuine Democrat," National Chairman James A. Farley, said:

"This convention will nominate a genuine Democrat—Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Later added the following statement:

"No one is surprised by the report that certain people prominent in organizations like the Liberty League will send telegrams to the convention or issue statements—the objectives and connections of people of this kind are by this time thoroughly well known to every American."

Prisoner Dies of Pistol Wounds

Homer Cox, 23, Succumbs in Hospital Monday Morning

DE QUEEN, Ark.—(P)—Shot through the chest and abdomen during a gun battle at the Sever county jail here Saturday night, Homer Cox, 23, died in a hospital here Monday.

Deputy Sheriff Gailther Flanigan was reported recovering Monday from a bullet wound received in the affair with Cox. The bullet that struck Flanigan fractured a bone in his right leg.

Story of Shooting

Constable Gus Ferguson who was with the men at the time of the shooting said he had a warrant for Cox's arrest on a check charge. He said Flanigan brought Cox to his home Saturday night and that they started to take the prisoner to the county jail.

Ferguson said when he and Flanigan entered the back door to the jail, Flanigan pulled his gun and Cox ran up the stairway as the deputy fired twice neither bullet taking effect.

Cox ran through the main court room and down the front steps into the lobby but front entrances were locked and he could not get out. Ferguson and Flanigan followed and Flanigan asked Ferguson to wait upstairs, saying he would go down and get Cox.

Shooting in Dark

Ferguson said the deputy descended the stairs and he immediately heard several shots and rushed down the steps and found Flanigan and Cox wrestling in darkness on the floor of the lobby, both wounded.

The constable said he pulled the men apart and then broke the glass in the front door and called for assistance.

Bystanders across the street secured a key, unlocked the door and assisted in getting the injured men to hospital.

Sheriff Jess Pickens said that investigation revealed Flanigan's gun a .45 calibre had been fired five times and Cox's, a .38, only once.

It was generally believed that Flanigan was injured by his own gun in the scuffle with Cox on the floor of the lobby. Ferguson's gun had not been fired. Pickens said, Ferguson said Cox had been arrested several times on minor charges that he had never carried a gun and that they had not thought to search him at the time of arrest.

Cox has a wife and a small daughter. Flanigan has a wife, son and daughter.

Britain and Italy Reach Agreement

Improvement of Relations Between Two Countries Reported

ROME.—(P)—Great Britain and Italy have reached an agreement in principle on the main points of a Mediterranean military accord, army circles said Sunday.

This projected accord was a powerful inducement leading Great Britain to the decision to lift sanctions, these sources added, and was one of the main reasons for an improvement in relations between the two countries.

Main points of the proposed agreement regulating British and Italian sea, air and land forces in the Mediterranean are:

1. British naval supremacy remains assured. The Italian fleet would be divided into three large units or squadrons, only one of which would be stationed near waters that might interest Britain, the other two in the upper Adriatic.

2. Italy would have the superior air position. She would keep permanently about 100 planes in Libya and another 100 would be divided between Sicily and the Aegean islands.

3. Land forces in Egypt and Libya would be limited to 75,000 men by each country, of which one-third would be motorized.

4. The British may fortify Cyprus and Alexandria in addition to Malta.

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Attorney General Carl Bailey announced Monday that he had accepted an invitation of Phillips county "Bailey for Governor" club to formally open his gubernatorial campaign in Helena with an address at 8 p. m. June 29.

Others to Speak

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Politics takes the play in Arkansas' week ahead as two more gubernatorial candidates officially launch their campaigns.

Sharing interest with the state's belated campaign will be the activities of the Arkansas delegation at the national Democratic convention in Philadelphia and the annual unofficial session of the Arkansas senate at Eureka Springs.

Senator Arthur Johnson of Star City, stakes his gubernatorial platform before the electorate Thursday at Pine Bluff. Senator John C. Ashley opens his campaign at Searcy on Saturday.

Pulaski County Judge R. A. Cook and Circuit Judge Marcus Bone delivered their initial addresses in the race for governor last Saturday a week after Secretary of State Ed F. McDonald broke the ice.

With only eight weeks remaining before the August Democratic primary, no opening dates have been announced by gubernatorial candidates. Lee Canzort, Tom Terral, Howard Reed and Dave Partain.

Denman to Open Campaign

The race for U. S. senator gains momentum this week as a second aspirant goes into action. Bill Denman of Prescott delivers his initial address in opposition to Senator Robinson at McGehee on Saturday. Cleveland Holland of Fort Smith already has started the fireworks in this race. J. Ross Venable, Little Rock, is the third candidate opposing the Democratic majority leader.

The senate session opens Friday on Lake Lucerne, two miles from Eureka Springs. Senator Richard R. Thompson said that most of the members of the body had announced intention of attending. Several hundred others have requested reservations, he reported, including most of the ten gubernatorial candidates.

Thompson said the event promises to be a very significant political gathering. Registration is set for Friday. Addresses and resolutions are on Saturday morning's program. Thousands are expected to gather to hear candidates for state offices during the afternoon. Loudspeakers also will bring President Roosevelt's acceptance speech from Philadelphia.

Your Baby's Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

As soon as the baby is able to sit alone, he begins exercises that are useful in developing good posture. These involve bending, reaching for objects held in front of him and over his head, and associated with this, a certain amount of relaxation.

When the child enters school, he will get regular exercise there, but it may be advisable to continue the exercises at home to insure good development and good posture.

In good posture, the abdomen is well in and flat, the buttock muscles not protruding in the back. In other words, the back should have a normal curve and not be hollowed. The weight of the body is carried on the front of the feet.

Here are a few simple exercises that help the baby develop good posture:

1. In a warm room, with plenty of fresh air, have the child take several long breaths through the nose, inhale and exhale slowly.
2. Stretch the baby's arms overhead with hands apart. Bend his body forward from the waistline, touching the floor with the tips of his fingers. This exercise may be repeated 10 times each morning.
3. Lay the baby face downward, raise his body with the hands flat on the floor, then lower. This may be repeated five to 10 times.
4. Lay the baby flat on his back, bring hands to shoulders and arms as near to the body as possible, then stretch legs to their utmost, at the same time extending the arms and bringing them down to the sides. This may be repeated four or five times each day.

Simple exercises of this type demand no special apparatus and are exceedingly useful in maintaining good physical conformation and posture. It is understood, of course, that the modern child indulges in outdoor sports, as well as swimming, badminton, volleyball, and similar indoor activities during the winter.

Clothing worn by growing children should be adapted to such exercises.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

The last examination paper has been filed away to collect dust, the big bell has given itself over to the stars, blackboards with washed faces are glooming alone in the twilight of shade-down rooms.

School's out, and so are the youngsters, as anyone with half an ear-drum can tell. So can Mother, and she doesn't need her ear-drums either.

Olivia's room looks like Coney Island on Sunday night. Stacy slept till ten and ate a banana for his breakfast. Peg went off with Dot Brown and didn't put a rag to the dishes. Now she's just home for lunch. Just the same number of children she had yesterday, has Mrs. Smith, but with four breakfasts all at different hours, the house disrupted as fast as she can clear it, and quarrels to smooth over, she feels as though an Alpine circus has slid down through the roof and taken possession of the place.

Appalled, she looks ahead at the summer and sighs, "If this be vacation I suppose I'll have to make the most of it."

Defeated before she starts, poor lady, she comforts herself by excusing her offspring fondly. "The poor little souls have been shut in so long, they need more freedom and less discipline. But I guess I can stand it."

If she but realized it, in a few short days these three will become completely disgruntled about having their way with no guiding hand on the reins. And she might make it more interesting for them and easier for herself if she gave this matter of freedom really serious thought.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

The future is struggling with the past these days. The world is trying to make up its mind whether to cling to the old system of anarchic nationalism, with its acceptance of war as an instrument of policy, or to turn a new order based on the concept of an orderly world community in which reason and justice are substituted for the rule of might.

It is in this way that James T. Shotwell, professor of history at Columbia University, views the international situation in his thoughtful new book, "On the Rim of the Abyss" (Macmillan, $3).

Now the League of Nations has taken many a bad knock in the last few years and Professor Shotwell admits as much very frankly; but he does not, for that reason, leap to the conclusion that the league's usefulness is gone and that we must return to the old rule of tooth and claw.

For the league, he says, can and must be salvaged. It must, for the simple reason that war does not pay any longer; there has to be a way for nations to settle their disputes peacefully.

The league is the handiest instrument, with all its defects, it can be made to work.

How? Revise the league, he urges, with the Pact of Paris as its base; make regionalism the keynote to security, provide for close co-operation of the league with non-member nations, cease identifying "justice" with the status quo, make the whole arrangement flexible, so treaties and boundaries can be adjusted to a constantly changing world.

Along such lines, he believes, the league can be made to emerge, not as an organization to "enforce" peace, but as one to attain and preserve peace by negotiation and conference.

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD—Stepin Fetchit is the laziest colored boy you ever did see.

Wasn't always lazy—not this lazy, anyway. These days he can't possibly get his heels off the floor, but time was when he danced. Used to swing it plenty in minstrel and medicine shows. There was work to be done, too, and Step did it. That was before he learned the joys and handsome benefits of lethargy.

Step was a dancer in Hollywood in the silent days, but not doing so well. Then the talkies came in and they put him in a short, with some languid lines. We aww supposed to be an indolent fella, and indolence came natural to Mr. Fetchit.

Finally he realized that the less he did, the more jobs he got—an astonishing but happy paradox.

So Step has been practically comatose ever since. Lethargy is more than a screen trademark; it has become his whole philosophy.

Reason For "Settin' Down"

He said: "It ain't that I don't think fast; I just don't move fast. A man has got to think fast to keep from doin' anything. You know what I mean?"

A man can think a lot faster when he's settin' down. . . . You understand.

Interviewing Fetchit takes a lot of time, and space limitations prohibit literal transcription of the way he talks. This column would be mostly blank space and yawns. Frequently his voice trails off in the middle of a sentence, and then there is a long pause while he does some more thinking.

No Complaint

"It's worked out mighty good with me," resumed Step. "Mighty good. Doin' nothin', I mean. I ain't planned anything—ain't studied anything. I jes' sit an' things happen to me. . . . You understand?"

"Now they want any way I could have—pla . . ."

"—no way I could have planned or schemed to get associated with Mr. Rogers. Nothin' I could do. Never did bother him with a manager, or an agent, or a press agent. So I didn't try at all, an' pretty soon they come and put me in some of his pict's."

"I'm religious. . . . You know what I mean? . . . I go to church reglar. Sure is peaceful an' nice—in church. . . . 'Yeah, church is peaceful. Religion is based on doin' nothin' . . . part of it, anyhow. You know what religion says? It says 'Have faith an' you can move mountains!' That's a mighty easy way to move a mountain. You understand?"

Official Wakers

The studio is very tolerant of Fetchit's somnolence. During every intermission in the shooting, he goes to dark corner and sits down. Stays until somebody comes and gets him. It's pretty trying, though, when they have to send somebody to his home to get him. Occasionally he grows so lazy that he forgets to come to the studio at all.

Step has remained under contract for 20th Century-Fox for years, and has made more money in steady salary than any other negro actor. Lost a lot of it, though. Mostly on the races. Doesn't plunge on the races any more; just bets a little out of a sense of loyalty.

Loyalty, anyway, is the motive he ascribes to his betting. He took his name, Stepin Fetchit, from a horse that came in for him at a big price years ago at a Texas track. His real name is Lincoln Theodore Perry.

Some of his most successful screen appearances have been in race track pictures. And the Whitney horse, Stepin Fetchit—the second nag so named—helped keep the actor's name alive during a long period of inactivity.

Producer-Playwright

Step is going to invest his money now. He's planning a little theater devoted to be called "Harlemwac"—a bit of Harlem in Hollywood. To this he expects to draw a wealth of idle negro vaudeville talent from the east.

RUNAWAY BRIDE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ON HER wedding day MARCIA CUNNINGHAM overheard her fiancé, BOB, talking to one of the bridesmaids that she loves her but can't afford to marry her. MARCIA felt then that she had overheard the conversation, then rushed away. She asks her friend, WENDY ANDREWS, to break the news to MARCIA's parents that the wedding is off.

The details for the honeymoon trip to France are in MARCIA's purse. Impulsively, she decides to start alone. A young man who is a stranger helps her get on the ship just before the gangplank is raised.

Next day she meets him again. He is PHILIP KIRKBY, an engineer recently returned from South America. The last night of the voyage they are together on the deck when a radioalarm comes for Phil.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER III

PHIL said gaily, "Camilla sends her love and says she will meet me at Cherbourg in the morning. That, from Camilla, is something special." He put away the radiogram that he had just received.

But he went on talking about the Pampas.

"I hope you marry Camilla in Paris and invite me to the wedding," Marcia said. "I have a whole trousseau. After all, I ought to go to one wedding."

"You could have," Phil reminded her evenly.

"The terms weren't right. His heart had compartments, and I wanted a lease to all of it." Instantly she was sorry for her confession. She did not want to discuss Bob with anyone—Bob who might have grown to love her in time—Bob who had asked her to be his wife instead of the half dozen other girls. Then she remembered that she probably had more money than the other girls!

Phil was saying things about the bachelors' quarters in the mountains and the shacks where the engineers who had wives with them lived—how much gayer and happier they were. She could see the tall boy at her side, striding up a hill at night, looking a little hungrily at the shacks that were homes.

Now with Bob—Bob hadn't wanted a home. Just a house for parties. A house located some place where it was accessible to people. "How will anyone ever find us?" he had asked when she had first shown him the long, low clapboard house in Connecticut. "Honey, just because we are being married doesn't mean that we are going into seclusion."

SHE had said nothing then about the intimacy of winter nights when the wood fires burned and the snow fell softly or madly—which did it matter?—on the glass windows that made half the great living room. She had not reminded him of the sweetness of the smell of honeysuckle and new roses in the spring, the mystery that fireflies carried in their yellow lamps across the fields in June and July and August. Some day, she had been sure, Bob would love the peace of the country, too. Now, watching Phil, Marcia knew that he was her kind of person. Her kind of person, but she loved Bob! Loved him so that the mere thought of his name was a tiny, poignant stab in her heart.

"How about a house on Long Island, if we must have four walls of our own and a plot of grass, my pet?" Bob had asked. "Say, at Aynslet. Then we'll be

Cotton Futures Have Good Week

Price Increase of $2.65 Per Bale Reported for Last Week

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—Cotton had a good week.

Futures prices gained from $2.25 to $2.65 per bale. Spot prices kept in step as the average price of middling closed Saturday at 12.28. Goods markets reported the best business in months. And as a final touch to the week's developments it appeared that the government cotton pool was practically out of the market.

Looking around for the reason for the spirited advance the trade selected one extremely well known cause, supply and demand.

For as reports of drought in the southeast foreboded a short crop in that area other advices told of an eager demand on the part of mills for cotton both here and abroad.

The outcome was the best price movement in months and new top levels for all futures for the present season.

At Saturday's close July sold at 12.12, October at 11.51, December at 11.48 and May at 11.51.

The movement in the July position, last of the old crop months, was attributed in several informed sources to a possible "squeeze." An important long interest was said to be still existing in this option. Short had expected to fill commitments by buying

Jackson's Homer Beats Cards, 6-4

Giants Win Second Over St. Louis, Reducing Lead to 1/2 Game

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The Giants sliced the St. Louis Cardinals' National League lead to a slim half-game Sunday winning their second straight over the gas house gang by a six to four margin.

Travis Jackson's homer with two aboard in the midst of a four-run rally in the third inning proved to be the hit that downed the Cards, as Lefty Al Smith chalked up his seventh victory, although he had to be relieved by Freddy Fitzsimmons for the last three frames.

The Giants scored all their runs in the first four innings. Three passes by Ed Heusser, the Cards' starting pitcher, and Jim Rippel's long fly brought in one in the first. A pass, singles by Rippel and Gus Mancuso and Jackson's homer accounted for four in the third, and a 400-foot home run drive by Joe Moore wound up the winning run-making.

Pepper Martin's homer with one on gave the Cardinals two of their runs. Doubles by Virgil Davies and Rookie Glavadi and a single by Terry Moore accounted for the other two.

Manager Frankie Frisch of the Cards was chased off the coaching lines by Umpire Babe Pinelli when he disagreed with a decision on Terry Moore at first base in the fifth inning.

With the Chicago Cubs splitting a doubleheader in Brooklyn, the Cards' league leading margin was cut to the barest of edges. The loss Sunday gave the Giants the current series, two games to one.

Lumberjacks Are Shutout Here, 9-0

Hope Completely Off Form, Are Held to Four Singles

The Williams Lumber company baseball team took a 9 to 0 drubbing here Sunday before the hands of the New Boston Sportmen.

The Lumberjacks were completely off form. The Hope team was unable to advance a man to second base and only reached first base on four occasions.

The local team got off to a bad start, the first three men leading the bases. Giles, New Boston second baseman, came to bat and cleared the bases with a smashing drive that cleared the right field wall.

New Boston played errorless ball behind the four-hit pitching of Byrd. Terry, Sportsman shortstop, turned in a stellar game.

CARDUI

Helped Three Times

At three different times, Cardui has helped Mrs. Ike Wright, of Seely, Texas. "I used Cardui, when a girl, for cramps, and it helped then," she writes. Next, after marriage, she reports having taken Cardui when she felt weak, nervous and restless before her children were born.

And during middle life, it helped her again. "I was miserable," she explains. "I did not have an appetite. I was very blue and upset. I remembered Cardui had helped me, so I took it again and soon began to pick up. I ate and had more strength. I kept up the Cardui and did not have any more trouble. Is it any wonder that I recommend Cardui to all my friends?"

Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

PEOPLE MAKE THE TELEPHONE SYSTEM

Poles and wires and switchboards alone don't make a telephone system. You've got to have people.

You've got to have men and women and children that want to talk with each other. You've got to have operators sitting night and day before the switchboards. You need to have linemen willing to go out when the lines are down, and work with a 40-mile gale lashing sleet and snow into their faces.

It's folks that make a telephone system. When you figure out why service is better than it used to be, you find it's just people at work—men working problems out on American Telephone & Telegraph Company's staff, and inventors in Bell Laboratories, and the like.

The goal of the people who work for the Bell System is to furnish the people who use telephones with a service that is fast, and clear, and moderate in its cost to the user.
